CERN turns 60, celebrates peaceful collaboration for science <sup>[1]</sup>

Monday, 29 September, 2014

Today, CERN, the European Organization for Nuclear Research, is blowing out 60 candles at an event attended by official delegations from 35 countries. Founded in 1954, CERN is the largest particle physics laboratory in the world and a prime example of international collaboration, bringing together scientists of almost 100 nationalities.

To know more about CERN and this special day, please check the CERN website <sup>[2]</sup> and the event live this afternoon with the webcast in English <sup>[3]</sup> or French <sup>[4]</sup>.
